

Denmark – Country Report

Christian Thellufsen

The Danish National Survey and Cadastre

What is the status then?

"HAPPIEST PEOPLES IN THE WORLD

Denmark is the happiest country in the world! A scientific survey of international happiness carried out by Leicester University in England shows that the small kingdom of Denmark is home to the happiest people in the world.

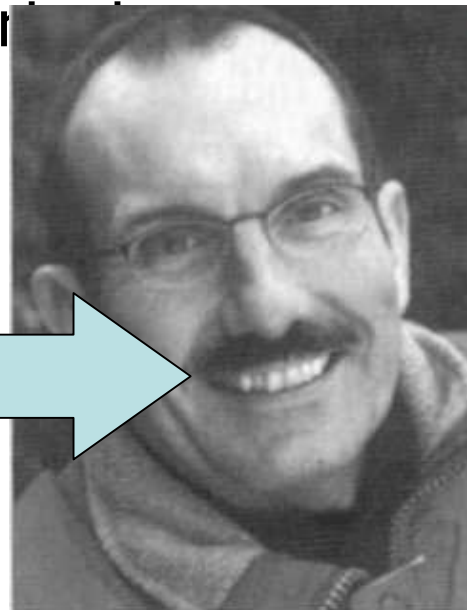

"Denmark holds the record of the heaviest tax burden in the world."

In the land administration area things are going okay as well...

- No big revoltes
- The property management system is excellent
- The planning system is working just fine
- We can gather the property information in a very efficient way ☺
- The land holder's security of tenure is rock solid

Big smile

However a twoheaded monster is emerging...

e-Government is an institutional approach to jurisdictional political operations

e-Governance is a procedural approach to cooperative administrative relations

e-Government
e-Governance

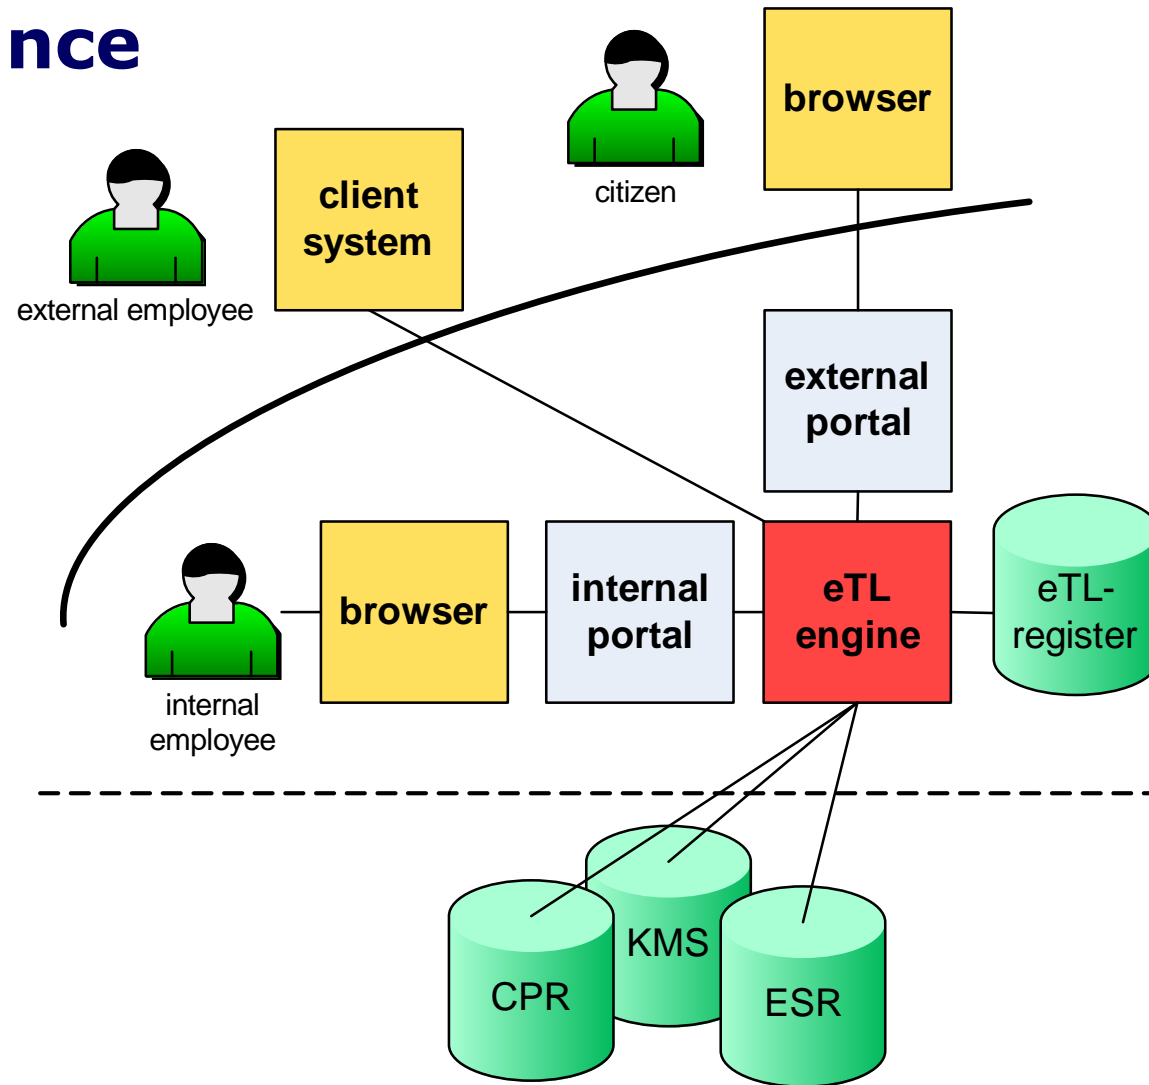

Changes are underway – all starting with e eConveyance

eCadastre

eConveyance

eCadaastre Updating and quality management system

Not as easy as thought...

Why is this? eCadaastre as an example

- The demands of up-to-dateness made the project very complex
- Contractors did not understand the task
- Long project time – replacement in staff
- No consensus internally – culture and power
- Stronger management was needed

Need for exchange of experiences?

- Many countries on the door step for the same development
- Both management and technical level
- Denmark would be happy to host a workshop on the seminar if needed